

Chair of the Research Board of the Data Science Institute at Imperial College, London

David Hand

Emeritus Professor of Mathematics

Emeritus Professor of Mathematics and Chair of the Research Board of the Data Science Institute at Imperial College, London.

He is also the Chief Scientific Advisor to Winton Capital Management and on the Board of the UK Statistics Authority.

He has served on the Expert Statistics panel of AstraZeneca, the Biometrics Advisory Board of GSK, and the Methodology Advisory Committee of the ONS, as well as working closely with many bodies in the retail credit sector.

He has received many awards for his work, including the Guy Medal of the Royal Statistical Society and the Box Medal from the European Network for Business and Industrial Statistics.

His 29 books include Principles of Data Mining, Measurement Theory and Practice, The Improbability Principle, and The Wellbeing of Nations.